Synopsis

Place: A small town off Highway 27.

Time: Not so long ago

Waitress, based on the 2007 movie of the same title, follows the story of Jenna, a waitress in a small town diner who finds herself trapped in an abusive relationship with her husband Earl. With no hope for a brighter future, she finds escape through the baking of pies - creations of her own that she names after their unique ingredients and the events that inspired them, as well as recipes handed down from her own mother. When Jenna discovers she is pregnant, she shares the news with her two best friends and fellow waitresses Becky and Dawn - women with their own nuances and quirks, but like Jenna, harboring fantasies of better lives and loves of their own. While her friends are supportive, it is the owner of the diner (Joe) who alerts Jenna to a baking contest whose prize may provide the opportunity she is seeking. When Jenna meets her new male gynecologist and sparks of lust start to fly between them, she's forced to face up to all the things inside her that are hurting, and take action to change them. Featuring a delightful score by Grammy-award winning singer/songwriter Sara Bareilles, Waitress celebrates the power of friendship, dreams, the family we choose and the beauty of a well baked pie.
